5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO.US

NIKKI M. MASCALI, REPORTER

The world's largest cooperative housing complex in the Bronx is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year. I spoke to the president of its board of directors, who moved in in 1969, at 17, and she reflected on what it was like then, in this massive city-within-a-city that was built on swampland. ## MEGA MILLIONS LOTTERY HITS RECORD $1.6 BILLION

1 The U.S. Mega Millions jackpot grew to $1.6 billion, a world record for a lottery, after Friday's drawing produced no winner of the grand prize, officials said. The next Mega Millions draw will be on Tuesday, after no one hit all of the numbers of 15, 23, 53, 65, 70 and the Mega Ball 7 during Friday night's draw. "Mega Millions has already entered historic territory, but it's truly astounding to think that now the jackpot has reached an all-time world record," Gordon Medenica, lead director of the Mega Millions Group, said in a statement. The Mega Millions is coordinated by the Multi-State Lottery Association, along with several other lottery games including one called Powerball. A drawing was held on Saturday for a Powerball jackpot worth an estimated $470 million. The winning numbers were: 16, 54, 57, 62, 69, and Powerball 23. There was no winner for Saturday's Powerball drawing and the new jackpot is estimated to be $620 million, the lottery announced on its website early Sunday. The lump-sum cash payout is estimated at $354.3 million and the next drawing for the Powerball is set for Wednesday.

'DEADLIEST' TAIWAN TRAIN CRASH KILLS 18

2 Eighteen people died and 175 were injured when a train derailed in northeastern Taiwan on Sunday, authorities said, in the island's worst rail disaster in more than three decades. Four carriages overturned in the crash, which occurred in Yilan County near the coast on a line popular among tourists when all eight cars ran off the tracks on a bend near a station, officials said. It was unclear what caused the crash. As of 9:35 p.m., all 366 passengers onboard — including the dead and injured — had been evacuated or removed from the wreckage, the Taiwan Railways Administration said. "The train was going very fast. I thought to myself: Why was it not slowing down on a curve?" 30-year-old Henry Tseng, who was onboard one of the overturned carriages and suffered eye injuries, told Reuters. "I hit a wall when the car started to flip. Around five to six people were thrown out of the carriage door... There's no time to think what happened. Everyone was in a rush to get out," he added. Hundreds of rescuers and military personnel worked through the wreckage with spotlights on Sunday night in search of survivors.

EX-FA CHAIR: 'OLD MEN' BLOCKED WEMBLEY SALE

4 A proposed £600 million ($784.14 million) sale of Wembley Stadium that would have helped fund grassroots football in England collapsed because of "old men" who are "living in the past," according to former Football Association chairman Greg Dyke. He blamed opposition from the FA Council for causing Shahid Khan, the owner of Premier League club Fulham and the Jacksonville Jaguars NFL team, to withdraw his offer to buy the iconic national stadium. The Council, which has almost 130 mostly male members, should not have been making the decision anyway, said Dyke, who was FA chairman from 2013 to 2016. "If I'd been chairman, I would have said it is the [FA] board's decision," he told the BBC's Sportsweek program on Sunday. "I don't think the council is equipped to make this decision — that is what the FA board is for. "The council is living in the past, as it always has done. If you want to have a step change in grassroots facilities in this country you need this sort of money to be spent. "It's bizarre that the old men of the FA Council have stopped this."

NYT: TRUMP TRYING TO 'REDEFINE' TRANSGENDER

5 The Trump administration is attempting to strip transgender people of official recognition by creating a narrow definition of gender as being only male or female and unchangeable once it is determined at birth, the New York Times reported on Sunday. The Department of Health and Human Services has undertaken an effort across several government departments to establish a legal definition of sex under Title IX, the federal civil rights law that bans discrimination on the basis of sex, the Times said, citing a government memo that it obtained. That definition would be as either male or female, unchangeable, and determined by the genitals a person is born with, the Times reported. Such an interpretation would reverse the expansion of transgender rights that took place under the previous administration of President Barack Obama. It would also set back aspirations for tolerance and equality among the estimated 0.7 percent of the population that identifies as transgender. Most transgender people live with a profound sense that the gender assigned to them at birth was wrong and transition to the opposite sex, while others live a non-binary or gender-fluid life.

Nearly 3,000 body cameras recalled due to defect explosion at a SI precinct

The recall comes after a body camera exploded at a Staten Island precinct.

SARAH LUOMA
letters@metro.us

After an officer was almost injured by an exploding body camera, the NYPD has shelved close to 3,000 cameras of the same model.

On early Sunday morning, a Staten Island officer working at 121 Precinct, who had just put on a Vievu LE5 body camera, noticed the device was smoking from the bottom. He immediately took it off and within minutes the device exploded inside the precinct.

"It unexpectedly began to smoke and fell from his shirt to the ground," where "it then caught fire and was damaged," an official shared when discussing the scary incident.

Following the explosion, the NYPD put out a warning to all surrounding precincts. Police Commissioner James O'Neill is recalling the body cameras that are used in 16 other locations.

After examination, it appeared the LE5 body cameras may have had defective batteries, causing the cameras to ignite and explode.

"The incident revealed a potential for the battery inside the camera to ignite," according to the NYPD in a statement. "The cause and scope of the defect are currently being investigated."

The statement went on to say that "all officers assigned LE5 cameras were instructed to immediately remove the cameras and bring them back to their commands."

$15K

Currently, more than 15,000 body cameras are used out in the field to monitor the work of police officers around the state.

While the NYPD deals with the defective cameras, New York officers will wear an older version of the Vievu body camera, the LE4.

Currently, more than 15,000 body cameras are used out in the field to monitor the work of police officers around the state.

According to The New York Times, the NYPD initially wanted all uniformed officers to be wearing cameras by the end of 2018, a year earlier than what was planned originally. While not all NYPD officers had been equipped with body cameras, the reviews were positive, as one officer said the body cameras served as a valuable crime deterrent.

"[Officers] like it because when they turn the cameras on, most perps see it and won't act up because they know they're being recorded," one officer, who requested anonymity, told Metro.

According to The New York Times, Sydney Siegmeth, vice president of global communications for Axon, the parent company of body camera manufacturer Vievu, said the company was investigating the incident with police.

Longtime resident reflects on 50th anniversary of Bronx Co-op City

"It's hard to compare Co-op City with any other entity," longtime resident Linda Berk said of the world's largest cooperative housing development.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

Linda Berk was just 17 when she moved into Co-op City in the Baychester section of the Bronx in 1969 — and the world's largest cooperative housing development is still her home today.

"It was brand-spanking-new. Nobody else had ever lived there before. I grew up in Harlem, and then we moved to the Bronx, and everything was always aged, well-worn," Berk said with a laugh. "Then we got to move here, and this was going to be our space."

Though she left for a few years, Berk moved back into her family's unit after her mother died in 1988. Now, as the complex celebrates its 50th anniversary this December, Berk is president of the board of directors at Riverbay, the management company at Co-op City.

"We have roughly 1,000 employees, a quarter-of-a-billion-dollar annual budget," Berk explained.

If Co-op City were a standalone, it would be the 10th largest city in the state, Berk said. With 15,300 units, "it is a sizable entity with somewhere between 45,000 and 50,000 residents," she said, adding that it currently has a three- to five-year wait list.

Residents in 700 units have been there all 50 years, and the development is the nation's largest NORC, or naturally occurring retirement community. "Because of its affordability, people tend to stay here — they're not going anywhere else because it's an economical way to exist on a fixed income," Berk explained.

While "isolated," Co-op City is self-sufficient, boasting its own garbage collection, police department, two post offices and shopping centers, professional offices and even its own Little League.

Despite "tough times" that included 25 percent rent spikes, infrastructure defects and transportation changes, "people have a sense of community, and it's hard to compare Co-op City with any other entity you might live in," Berk said.

IMAGE PROVIDED

When Berk and her family moved in a year after Co-op City began accepting residents, "there was nothing over here. People who came here in the beginning were pioneers, it was really like being on a frontier in many ways," she said. "There was a sense of bonding because we were all in this together, and we were going to survive together."

Surrounded by highways, Co-op City was built on swampland that had been the short-lived Freedomland amusement park. As it was so sparse at first, Time magazine called it "relentlessly ugly" in 1969, something Berk never agreed with — until she recently came across an old photo taken from her living-room window.

"The view was so bare, so stark. It was brown grass, the trees were little baby trees — it didn't look enticing or pretty at all," she said. "Now I look out my window and it's lush with big, tall trees and grass."

US lawmakers blame Saudi crown prince for Khashoggi murder

"Yes, I think he did it," Sen. Bob Corker said on Sunday.

Top U.S. lawmakers turned their ire on Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman on Sunday and said they believed he ordered the killing of Saudi journalist Jamal Khashoggi, although the Trump administration maintained a more cautious stance.

"Do I think he did it? Yes, I think he did it," Republican Sen. Bob Corker, the influential chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in an interview with CNN.

Corker, who received a classified briefing on the case on Friday, said he was waiting for investigations to be completed and hoped that Turkey would share any audiotapes of the killing of Khashoggi in the Saudi consulate in Istanbul on Oct. 2.

However, he made it clear that he believed the murder was directed by the prince, who has consolidated power in the world's top oil exporter and courted U.S. President Donald Trump.

"Let's let this play out, but my guess is that at the end of the day the United States and the rest of the world will believe fully that he did it," Corker told CNN's "State of the Union."

The prince has denied involvement with the disappearance of Khashoggi, a critic of the government who wrote columns for the Washington Post and lived in the United States. Saudi Foreign Minister Adel al-Jubeir went on U.S. television to insist that the killing was a mistake, and sought to shield the prince from the widening crisis.

On Saturday, Trump joined European leaders in pushing Saudi Arabia for more answers after Riyadh changed its story and acknowledged that the journalist died at the consulate.

White House officials said on Sunday that Trump has not changed his belief that the crown prince is a strong leader who is passionate about his country. They said he and his advisers want to see the results of both the Turkish and Saudi probes.

Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin, who is traveling in the region, said the Saudi explanation was a "good first step but not enough."

He said it was premature to discuss sanctions, in line with Trump administration efforts to censure a killing that has drawn international outrage while also protecting relations with the Saudis.

However, a number of Trump's fellow Republicans joined their Democratic colleagues in Congress in expressing impatience with the shifting Saudi responses.

Corker said the Saudis have "lost all credibility" and fellow Republican Sen. Ben Sasse said they "have a lot of explaining to do."

"I think it stretches credulity to believe the crown prince wasn't involved in this."
Sen. Rand Paul

Both Republicans and Democrats have turned their attention to the role of the crown prince, with whom Trump and his son-in-law and White House adviser Jared Kushner have cultivated a close relationship.

"I think it stretches credulity to believe the crown prince wasn't involved in this," Sen. Rand Paul, a Republican close to Trump, said on "Fox News Sunday." REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated ) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

Lioness kills father of her cubs at Indy zoo

A lioness killed the father of her three offspring, suffocating her mate by locking her jaws onto his neck at the Indianapolis Zoo in an attack not fully understood by zoo staff.

The lions had been held together at the zoo for eight years, producing three cubs in 2015, and zookeepers had never before noticed any aggression between the two, the zoo said in a statement issued on Friday.

The death devastated zookeepers and the cause may never be understood, the curator of the zoo said.

"They build strong bonds with the animals so any loss affects us all greatly. For a lot of us, it's just like a family member," David Hagan, curator of the Indianapolis Zoo, said in an interview.

GETTY IMAGES

Zoo staff were alerted by "an unusual amount of roaring" coming from the lion pen on Monday and arrived to find the 12-year-old female lion Zuri in a fight with the 10-year-old male lion Nyack, the zoo said in a statement.

"She had Nyack by the neck. Keepers came up and saw what was occurring and made an attempt to separate the two. But she continued to hang onto Nyack by the neck until he stopped moving," Hagan said.

A necropsy found that Nyack died of suffocation from injuries to the neck. REUTERS

Thousands of Hondurans in US-bound migrant caravan head into Mexico

The president tweeted that he intends to turn away the migrants at the border.

A U.S.-bound caravan of thousands of mostly Honduran migrants who have been condemned as unwelcome by President Donald Trump, began moving into Mexico on Sunday, shadowed by hundreds of Mexican police en route to the border city of Tapachula.

The migrants have defied threats by Trump that he will close the U.S.-Mexico border if the caravan advances and warnings from the Mexican government that they risk deportation if they cannot justify seeking asylum in Mexico.

Dressed in riot gear, police arrived along a southern highway in several buses, ahead of the throngs of men, women and children marching north after they crossed the Guatemalan border.

An unidentified police officer told Reuters there were no orders to block the caravan.

"We're just making sure they pass safely and then we'll steer them" to a migrants shelter outside the city center of Tapachula, about 20 miles northwest of the border.

As a military helicopter circled overhead, migrants who said they were fleeing a toxic mix of violence, poverty and corruption in Central America wondered if police would seek to turn the caravan back.

Most said they felt safer advancing as part of a large group.

"We're going to make it, we're going to keep moving so long as they don't stop us," said Honduran Jaffe Borjas, 17, marching alongside a childhood friend at the head of the column that stretched far down the highway to the horizon.

The multitude of migrants clogged the highway leading north from the border city of Ciudad Hidalgo in the southern Mexican state of Chiapas, many breaking into song.

"If you send us back, we will return!" a large crowd shouted in unison under the intense glare of the morning sun.

"We are not criminals, we are workers!"

Trump has threatened to halt aid to Honduras and Guatemala, and potentially close the U.S. border with Mexico with the help of the military if the migrants' march is not stopped.

On Sunday, the president tweeted: "Full efforts are being made to stop the onslaught of illegal aliens from crossing our Southern Border. People have to apply for asylum in Mexico first, and if they fail to do that, the U.S. will turn them away. The courts are asking the U.S. to do things that are not doable!"

Mexico's government has said throughout the past week that it would register the migrants and process requests for asylum. Those attempting to skip the process would face deportation, but the size of the caravan will test Mexico, which has sought help from the United Nations to manage the issue.

Encamped for two nights using backpacks for pillows and tents made of trash bags on a long bridge between Guatemala and Mexico, the migrant caravan began in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, last week and grew exponentially as it passed through Guatemala.

On Saturday, Mexican immigration authorities only allowed some 640 migrants through the official border crossing on a bridge spanning the Suchiate River.

The slow pace of legal processing prompted thousands to cross the river illegally by raft or swimming, according to local officials and migrant organizers. REUTERS

Climate change could disappear UNESCO World Heritage sites

Some UNESCO World Heritage sites are in danger of flooding by 2100.

MIGUEL VELASQUEZ, MWN

GETTY IMAGES

Some UNESCO World Heritage sites, located in coastal areas of the Mediterranean Sea and exposed to risks of rising sea level, are in danger of flooding because of climate change.

The conclusion was confirmed in a recent investigation conducted by researchers at Germany's Kiel University, who calculated the risk of coastal flooding and erosion in four scenarios of sea-level rise up to the year 2100.

The data shows that 49 UNESCO World Heritage sites are at risk, and 42 of them are in danger of coastal erosion. The study stated that by the year 2100, the risk of flooding could increase by 50 percent and the risk of erosion by 13 percent throughout the Mediterranean Sea region.

Metro talked with Lena Reimann, researcher at the department of geography at Kiel University and author of the study, to learn more.

Tell us about your research.
We started the work almost exactly two years ago, when we began correcting the WHS data provided on the UNESCO website, going over each Mediterranean World Heritage site one by one. The spatial database that we have produced for this study includes a number of attributes of each World Heritage site (e.g., heritage type, location in urban or rural areas, distance from the coast). To account for flood risk, we combined the spatial database with model simulations of the coastal floodplain of today's 100-year storm surge events under four sea-level rise scenarios until 2100, which we added to the storm surge height.

What were the results?
I was surprised that such a high number of World Heritage sites are potentially at risk until 2100, and the vast majority of these are already at risk under current conditions. Both risks may increase considerably by 2100, depending on the amount of sea-level rise. At individual sites, flood risk may increase by over 100 percent, for example at the Historic Areas of Istanbul, Turkey, or Syracuse and the Rocky Necropolis of Pantalica, Italy, until 2100 under the high-end scenario. Erosion risk may increase by more than 40 percent under the same scenario conditions, for example at Ephesus, Turkey, or Butrint, Albania. The results of Venice and its Lagoon did not surprise us at all because it is well-known that Venice is at very high risk from coastal flooding.

How much danger do UNESCO sites face?
Some of the sites at very high risk could get seriously impacted by an extreme event such as a storm flood. However, sea level rise is a slow process, and we can install adaptation measures proactively that help protect these sites. That is why it is important to raise awareness of policymakers, heritage managers and the public regarding these risks, so that appropriate planning can be initiated and action can be taken.

What's next?
One path of future research is to conduct national- to local-scale assessments using a refined methodology as a basis for developing more specific adaptation strategies at a smaller number of sites or at individual sites. It is further of considerable interest to develop a typology of World Heritage sites in order to devise a set of possible adaptation measures at different types of World Heritage. In this context, an interdisciplinary workshop bringing together experts on World Heritage, sea-level rise, and coastal adaptation (e.g., engineers, architects) may be a good starting point.

GETTING THROUGH LONG FLIGHTS

One of the only ways to get through a painfully cramped and long flight is to ease in and try to get some quality sleep to pass the time. It's either that or watch a heavily edited version of "Deadpool 2" as you try not to rub elbows with the person sitting next to you. Even worse is if you get stuck in the middle seat and have to contort your body into a toothpick in order to avoid any awkwardness before you land. But what is the solution? If you take some sleeping pills or Dramamine to help you get through it, you run the risk of being one of those sleeping limp bodies that falls all over the passenger next to them with any slight turbulence. Is this a moment where we should be selfish with our time and comfort while getting through an unavoidably uncomfortable period of international travel limbo? It's hard to say. But one word of advice: If you can get the first row on a flight, do it! The extra leg room will be one of your only silver linings.

CMX CineBistro is located on the Upper East Side.

The city's newest dine-in movie theater, CMX CineBistro, prefers to think of itself as a "restaurant that shows movies."

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

Going to the movies has lost some of its glamour, but not at CMX CineBistro NYC. The luxury dine-in theater just opened its first location in the city on the Upper East Side, a modern space that reimagines the dinner-and-a-movie experience.

"Our experience centers on sophistication, luxury and pampering," says Fred Meyers, vice president of operations for CMX. "We think about everything that people experience when they go to a traditional theater, and we try to make it the opposite: stress-free, an escape from crowds and the boisterousness of a typical multiplex."

Meyers describes CMX CineBistro NYC as more like "a restaurant that shows movies." Because of that, the focus is on service and hospitality catered especially for the grown-up date night crowd — no one under age 21 is allowed into showings after 6 p.m.

In fact, there are a lot of rules at CMX CineBistro NYC, and movie fans will love them all.

What a night at CMX CineBistro is like

CMX CineBistro spent a year and a half converting the former Clearview Cinemas at 400 E. 62nd St., creating a five-story theater with six screens and installing two full bars that feel modern but still warm and intimate.

The menu is described as American bistro — "as our chef likes to say, that means he gets to play and have fun" — spanning a ribeye steak and pastas to Korean-style cauliflower, Mexican duck machaca, lobster cannoli, chicken and churros, and salads and burgers, including a vegetarian option made with a lentil-based patty.

There are daily food and cocktail specials, and servers will even provide wine-pairing suggestions, just as in a regular restaurant.

"Everything is made in house, right down to the whipped cream on our desserts," says Meyers. "We're focused on a white tablecloth-quality culinary experience. It's not your typical finger food. It's more refined dining."

arrive before showtime. Ticket holders are asked to be at CineBistro half an hour before their movie starts, when the screening room opens and you're escorted to your seat (which are chosen when you buy your ticket).

Unlike the similarly upscale iPic theater in the Seaport District or Alamo Drafthouse in Brooklyn, both of which allow ordering throughout the movie, CineBistro asks guests to order their food and drinks during this half-hour window, and aims to have everything delivered to their seats and the check settled before the opening credits roll. The theater's large leather seats all recline, with most built as loveseats where the center armrest can be folded up. Each person has their own table, which can be swiveled away after they're done eating.

"All that is done for one simple reason: We don't want to interrupt the movie experience with service," says Meyers. "We really do value the movie experience for our guests."

"Late" arrivals will have to place their order at one of the bars and receive a pager that will vibrate when their food and drinks are ready, which they'll have to carry back to their seats.

As for that all-important movie experience, CMX CineBistro theaters have Dolby 7.1 sound systems and showtimes from noon to midnight. Movies will be primarily new mainstream films, with one screen dedicated to art-house and independent films. Tickets are $17 for all matinees and evening shows Monday through Thursday. On Friday through Sunday nights, evening tickets are $25.

"Daredevil" is streaming now on Netflix. NICOLE RIVELLI/NETFLIX

'Daredevil' star on introducing iconic villain for season three

Charlie Cox teases Bullseye's origin story this season.

Every superhero has an archenemy. Batman has the Joker. Captain American has the Red Skull. Superman has Lex Luthor. When it comes to Daredevil, Matt Murdock's longtime comicbook foe is the deadly Bullseye.

Marvel fans should be giddy about "Daredevil" season3 then, as the hit Netflix series will introduce the iconic baddie this year, played by Wilson Bethel. According to the man behind the Daredevil mask, Charlie Cox, the new season will serve as a bit of an origin story for Bullseye, who's set to cause some havoc under the direction of Vincent D'Onofrio's Wilson Fisk, aka the Kingpin, who's also back to cause some trouble in Hell's Kitchen.

We caught up with Cox to chat about "Daredevil" season three, his new nemesis and more.

Matt Murdock was on the verge of death after "The Defenders." Where do we find him at the start of season three?
We kind of inherited where we were going to start off based on everything that happened in "The Defenders." What Erik [Oleson], the new showrunner, decided to do was really embrace that and kind of go fully into the level of Matt's brokenness. What we discover early on in season 3 is he's obviously very physically broken because he had a building fall on him. What ends up being a little bit more interesting, I hope, is he's kind of emotionally and spiritually broken in a way that we haven't seen him before. What I mean by that he's questioning who he is, what he is, what he's capable of, the fundamental nature of himself.

The Kingpin is back to cause some trouble. How has his relationship with Murdock evolved?
What I was excited about this season, because in season 1, Fisk and Murdock kind of become aware of each other for the first time, the animosity had to build and reach a crescendo in season 1. What's fun about season 3, the mention of their names now brings up a whole reservoir of hatred and anger and frustration. We get to start right up there at 10 and take it even further.

Season three also introduces a new villain, the iconic Bullseye, who gets into a pretty epic fight scene with Murdock later in the season. How would you describe his introduction to the series and what trouble he has in store for Daredevil?
This is kind of a Bullseye origin story. It's up for grabs when he becomes Bullseye, in the same way season 1 was a Daredevil origin story and you could kind of decide when he deserved to earn that title… In terms of their relationship, initially at least, Bullseye – or this Agent Poindexter as he's known – is really just a weapon of Fisk's. He's a tool that Fisk uses to his advantage and is a barrier Daredevil has to go through to get to Fisk. What, of course, is going to become apparent towards the end of the season is that he is of himself a worthy adversary and someone who's going to require a personal level of detail in order to overcome. We get to see the beginning of that iconic relationship develop.

Safe, effective ways to treat kidney stones

Anyone who has ever suffered from kidney stones knows just how painful it can be. It's little wonder that more than half a million people go to the emergency room for kidney stone problems every year, according to the National Kidney Foundation.

So what are kidney stones? They're essentially hard mineral deposits that form inside the kidneys. When the fluid in urine is unable to break them down, they'll pass through the ureter and bladder—which is generally a painful process. There's a wealth of anecdotal reports likening kidney stone pain to that of childbirth. The truth is that no two cases are alike, but early diagnosis is critical when it comes to getting ahead of it. Many times, this comes down to understanding the specific risk factors that might make you more likely to develop kidney stones. Family history, frequent dehydration, certain dietary issues, and obesity are all on the list. Board Certified Urologist Dr. David Shusterman of NY Urology takes a proactive approach. Thanks to a mix of preventative medicine and some simple lifestyle changes, you may be able to prevent kidney stones before they ever develop.

If a kidney stone is already in motion, Dr. Shusterman's expert team can quickly identify it using ultrasound imaging, then get things moving with innovative treatment options that have made NY Urology a nationally recognized leader in the field. He leads with holistic medicine with the goal being to break down kidney stones so that they can pass as naturally and easily as possible. NY Urology provides a cutting-edge, noninvasive treatment called extracorporeal shock wave lithotripsy (ESWL), which relies on sound waves to break apart the stones via focused vibrations. The in-office procedure is completely safe, and recovery is typically pretty swift.

Another option is placing something called a nephrostomy tube into the kidneys. This plastic catheter essentially lets urine drain directly from the kidneys during the treatment process. The result is near-immediate pain relief because you're eliminating backed-up urine and helping things flow more easily. A ureteral stent works in much the same way, bolstering the body's ability to drain urine and, in turn, safely encouraging the natural healing process. The soft plastic stent is temporarily placed directly into the ureter to help urine flow more freely. When ureters are blocked up by kidney stones, pain and discomfort are on the horizon. Stents open these passages.

When all else fails, NY Urology also specializes in minimally invasive surgery using a device called a ureteroscopy to eliminate painful, stubborn kidney stones. Making its way through the urethra and bladder, and into the ureter, the device zeros in on the kidney stone and swiftly removes it. The best part is that it's a fairly straightforward outpatient procedure that requires no incisions. In extreme situations where the stone is too large to remove with a ureteroscopy, Dr. Shusterman may call on a more in-depth procedure that involves a small incision in the back. The upside here is that the success rate is high, helping patients safely get rid of large kidney stones in one fell swoop.

Whether you're looking to prevent kidney stones or address one that's already wreaking havoc, NY Urology is your best resource. Book an appointment today with Dr. Shusterman, located at 800 Second Avenue on the corner of 42nd Street. Call (212) 991-9991 and start mapping out a plan for living a pain-free life without kidney stones.

Steve Carell hopes 'Beautiful Boy' helps raise awareness around drug addiction

"It's terrifying to see what's happening across the country."

matthew.juul@metro.us

One of the leading contenders this Oscar season will no doubt be "Beautiful Boy," a gut-wrenching drama about drug addiction starring Timothée Chalamet and Steve Carell.

The film is based on a pair of memoirs, "Beautiful Boy: A Father's Journey Through His Son's Addiction" by journalist and author David Sheff (played by Carell), as well as "Tweak: Growing Up on Methamphetamines" by David's son Nic (played by Chalamet), a recovering meth addict. The drama doesn't shy away from showing just how complicated addiction and the recovery process can be, as well as the financial and mental toll it takes on the family members who try to support a loved one struggling with the disease.

"Beautiful Boy" is a particularly timely film: Drug overdoses killed a record 72,000 Americans last year, and drugs are the leading cause of death for Americans under the age of 50. While substance abuse is a nationwide issue, it's a topic that's especially relevant to Carell's home state of Massachusetts, which has one of the highest rates of opioid-related overdose deaths in the country.

During a red carpet event for "Beautiful Boy" in Boston on Thursday, Carell told Metro that he felt it was important to show the film in the Bay State due to its struggles with the opioid crisis. The actor also praised Sen. Ed Markey, who also attended the screening, for his efforts in leading the charge on the issue.

"I have to applaud Sen. Markey for rallying behind this," Carell said. "I know the opioid crisis is one of his big agendas, and it's terrifying to see what's happening across the country."

"It's an epidemic," he added. "I think, even in a small way, a film like this can get some awareness out there."

The new film tackles the complicated nature of drug addiction and recovery.

In the film, Chalamet's Nic seems to be trapped in a constant cycle of relapsing, despite making so many strides and even staying clean for more than a year at one point. While Carell admitted that he didn't know a lot about methamphetamine going into the project, he was surprised to learn about how much the drug alters brain chemistry and "reduces your capacity for rational thought."

"It makes it that much more difficult to get out of the throes of it," Carell said. "It's such an insidious drug — as they all are — but meth is especially so."

In addition to its portrayal of an addict's struggle with recovery, Carell felt that it was important for "Beautiful Boy" to show audiences an intimate look at how addiction isn't just a singular disease. It ravages the lives of an addict's family and friends as well.

"It is important to get a balance of both sides," Carell said. "It's destroying a lot of people at the same time."

Pop star Kat Deluna partners with Playworks to help stop bullying in schools

Bullying is a major problem among our nation's children. That is why Playworks, the country's leading nonprofit bringing awareness to and affecting change to transform children's social and emotional health, is taking it to the schools with the help of special guest and spokesperson, international Dominican pop star Kat Deluna, for their "Real Players Don't Bully" campaign for National Bullying Prevention Month.

The program will empower children to be more empathetic to their fellow students and set an example for their underclassmen to see that taking the high road through understanding and kindness is always the best option for paying it forward.

"We're leveraging friends and celebrity talent, like our friend Kat Deluna, to really turn the spotlight on bullying and prevention and teach kids that it's cool to be kind and more empathetic to their peers," explains Playworks New York and New Jersey Executive Director Kim McCall.

In fact, Playworks found a perfect partner with Deluna, who's new song "Nueva Actitud" ("New Attitude") sends a positive message of holding your head up no matter what sort of adversity comes your way. As a native of the Bronx and Newark, New Jersey, who lived in the Dominican Republic for a time as a child, Deluna had her fair share of experience with bullying at a young age.

"I've had many experiences with bullying," says Deluna, who gave a talk for kids from P.S. 9 Teunis G. Bergen Elementary School in Prospect Heights, Brooklyn. "Primarily, it was when I was in elementary [school]. I was born here but I went to live in the Dominican Republic. I came back at the age when I realized I could sing. I'm a singer. I'm a ballad singer. I remember the director at school heard about it and he brought me to the school and automatically put me in the choir. I didn't have to audition like the other kids. A few people, of course, took that wrong. Then I got leads, which is where you can sing in front of the choir. Some kids did not take that well. So I got jumped by five girls who were older."

Although the program's partnership with Deluna has just begun, she is excited for the possibility of creating a positive impact for children around the country who may be experiencing similar situations to her own.

"I definitely want to get together behind the scenes to find ways where I can really get with the kids and make it a bigger thing," says Deluna. "I'm really happy with what's going on, where we all want to help each other and thrive."

Become an all-star lifeguard with New York's Safest

This lifeguard training school will give high school students the skills they need to get their dream summer job. PAT KING

Finding a summer job can be a job in itself when you are in high school. The options for "cool" jobs that you can find to earn a little spending money while you are on break are few and far between. Amaury Sanchez is out to solve this problem for teenagers all over the city with his New York's Safest training program for new lifeguards.

With nearly 30 years of experience teaching swim lessons in Manhattan, Sanchez has risen the ranks to become the preferred swim instructor for the children of such A-list celebrities as Drew Barrymore and Liam Neeson. Now, he is aiming to give his wisdom to the next crop of young lifeguards in the city. So where did his inspiration come from?

"What I wanted to do was to create something long-lasting and meaningful. To leave a little dent on Earth before I go," explains Sanchez. "I said to myself, 'Well, the police officers in New York City are called "New York's Finest" and the firefighters are called "New York's Bravest."' I said, 'How come the lifeguards of NYC don't have some sort of tagline that sticks?' So, I wrote like 100 different funny ones. 'New York's Wettest,' I wish I'd kept it. It ended up being 'New York's Safest.' It just stuck. I trademarked it, registered it, and started teaching one-on-one lessons the way I wanted."

And there is reason behind the name. Sanchez's students will learn all of the skills a young lifeguard will need to keep New Yorkers safe while enjoying a dip all year round. Students will be coached to earn their lifeguard certification requirements as well as gain extensive training in CPR in two back-to-back weekend training sessions.

With New York's Safest, students will also learn the essential professional skills that a lifeguard will need to manage a pool. These skills will include pool and spa management, chemical treatment and overall maintenance, and understanding of revenue and luxury amenities.

Once each student has earned their certification, they can go directly to work. With over 180,000 empty lifeguard chairs in New York City last summer, students will definitely be able to find work after enrolling in New York's Safest.

"We don't realize that without the lifeguards we can't open properly," says Sanchez. "I want to make sure that we fill that gap [for] this summer coming up."

Vikes beat up sloppy Jets

Kirk Cousins and Co. breezed by the team he turned down this offseason.

JOE PANTORNO

Kirk Cousins' spurning of the New York Jets for the Minnesota Vikings in free agency during the offseason allowed Gang Green to draft Sam Darnold.

On Sunday afternoon in Week 7 action, it was Cousins who came out on top as the Vikings defeated the Jets 37-17 at MetLife Stadium.

Neither quarterback necessarily impressed as they had to deal with blustery conditions in New Jersey. Cousins completed 25-of-40 passes for 241 yards and a pair of touchdowns, which was good enough to get past Darnold, who struggled mightily.

The rookie, plagued by drops and mistakes, connected on just 17-of-42 passes for 206 yards, two total touchdowns and three interceptions.

New York clearly had the more difficult time getting any sort of offensive momentum, especially in the third quarter as the Jets didn't complete a single pass while picking up just 21 total yards.

Minnesota's run game proved to be the difference maker as Latavius Murray's two second-half rushing touchdowns paved an easy path to victory for the Vikings.

Murray rushed for 69 yards on 15 carries for the day, good for a 4.6-yard average per rush. New York, a strong run team, could only muster 65 yards on the ground.

It looked as though Jets fans had to start preparing for a shootout at first. Darnold managed to answer a Cousins 34-yard touchdown to Adam Theilen on the Vikings' opening drive with a 12-yard score to Chris Herndon.

Thielen went on to tie an NFL record with his seventh-straight 100-yard receiving game as he was the only receiver to put up a big game with 110 yards.

However, the offenses would dry up for most of the day as the wind that swirled near 40 miles per hour played a huge factor on the afternoon.

While Darnold and the Jets offense struggled in the first half, as he completed just 8-of-17 passes for 86 yards, a Dan Bailey field goal saw New York trail by three at the half.

Murray's first touchdown rush of the afternoon with 8:25 left in the third quarter from 11 yards out would put Minnesota up 10 and poised for more after Darnold was picked off on the ensuing drive. But it would only lead to Bailey knocking home his second field goal of the day.

A week after knocking home a franchise record seven field goals, Jets kicker Jason Myers would grab his first of Week 7, a 55-yarder whose degree of difficulty multiplied astronomically due to the wind to make it a 10-point game.

The Vikings would answer by making it a 17-point game early in the fourth quarter after Murray's second score of the game, a 38-yard rumble, only for the Jets to answer with a nine-play, 59-yard drive that saw Darnold complete his first passes of the second half. He would cap things off with a one-yard keeper with 10 minutes to go.

It would be as close as the Jets would get as Darnold's second pick of the day led to Cousins hitting Aldrick Robinson from 34 yards out on a 4th-and-8 with five minutes left.

Giants vs. Falcons: What to watch on MNF

The struggling Giants had 11 days to get ready for the Falcons in Atlanta.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Giants season is once again over before Halloween, a 1-5 dumpster fire of a franchise hobbling into a primetime, Monday Night Football appearance to close out Week 7 against the Atlanta Falcons.

The Giants have had 11 days of rest after a 34-13 beatdown at the hands of the Philadelphia Eagles two Thursdays ago, as the offense came hurtling back down to Earth after a surprising 31-point effort in a loss to the Carolina Panthers in Week 5.

As the script goes for dysfunctional teams, there are just as many story lines off the field as there are on, mostly centering around wide receiver Odell Beckham Jr. and ownership.

Monday night will see the Giants visit an irked Falcons that have lost two-straight close games as the narrative surrounding the franchise's ability to pull out wins continues to plummet. At 2-4, they're still within striking distance of the NFC South lead, and they could very well use the Giants as a punching bag to right the ship.

Here are a few things to watch on Monday night.

ODELL'S OUTBURSTS

The fiery Giants wide receiver once again made headlines for his antics during that dreadful loss to the Eagles on Thursday night, prompting team owner John Mara to comment on his desire to see Beckham create headlines for his play on the field rather than his actions off it.

The problem is, it looks like Beckham is the lone Giant that will not accept losing by simply rolling over and playing dead, because that's what has been the theme for much of the past two years.

The hapless Giants travel to Atlanta to take on the Falcons tonight. GETTY IMAGES

It's difficult to blame Beckham when things do boil over. As a wide receiver, you have to rely on the quarterback to find ways to get you the ball. Eli Manning and his offensive line are not making that happen.

Look for head coach Pat Shurmur and the Giants offense to find ways to utilize Beckham in different ways like in Week 5 against the Panthers, when he hit Saquon Barkley for a 57-yard touchdown pass.

ELI'S EVENTUAL BENCHING

With the halfway point of the 2018 season drawing near, it's become painfully, almost depressingly clear that Manning's time with the Giants is up.

The situation around him, mostly looking at the offensive line's inability to buy him time in the pocket, is not conducive to a 37-year-old quarterback who has no mobility and basically looks mentally shot.

Manning's internal clock seems out of whack, as he now expects to be hit within two seconds of the snap, which has him missing open receivers when the rare opportunity arises.

Against a Falcons aerial attack that ranks third-worst in the NFL, if Manning can't get things going for the sputtering passing game, it's only a matter of time before the Giants turn to Kyle Lauletta.

There's nothing else to lose at this point.

SAQUON IS STUPENDOUS

If there is one thing the Giants can take solace in this year, it's that they made the right draft pick in running back Saquon Barkley. That's right, even with quarterbacks on the board.

Barkley continued to prove that he is a superstar in the making after a ridiculous outing against the Eagles, posting 229 yards from scrimmage, including 130 rushing yards on just 13 carries.

He's proving to be the ultimate security blanket for Manning, who will seemingly check down to the running back at least 10 times per game as any sort of downfield options disintegrate.

It's gotten to the point where opposing defenses know that Barkley will get the ball 20 to 30 times per game and they still can't stop him thanks to an uncanny ability to make defenders miss and the agility to make quick cuts toward the open field.
